Design Options

Different Styles of Medals

Sample Photo

2-D Line Art
The artwork on the medal or coin is a two dimensional drawing.

Photo Image
We take a photograph and cast that image directly into the piece. *SPIN CAST ONLY

3-D
A three dimensional mold sculpted to the exact likeness of your photo.

3-D Add On

Base View SIDE VIEW

ADD A 3-D figure from a sample furnished by you, or use one of our many stock items to make a new design.

Multi Level Add On

Base View SIDE VIEW

1/32" add ons are attached to the item, allowing for smooth flat levels that are higher than the raised border.

Lasered Multi Level

Base View SIDE VIEW

Multiple textured levels can be lasered into your design to add different depths. Not available with all designs.

Cut Out

Medals and coins can have an area that is cut out of the design for a see thru effect. Not available on all designs.

Color Fill

Medals and coins can have color added to various areas to enhance the look of the item. Not available with all designs. Additional charges apply.

LASERABLE

All spin cast items have Laser Engravable finishes. Our spin cast finishes allow you to add both text and images to your medals. Any wattage laser can be used, allowing you to save hours of time versus rotary or diamond drag engraving. For zinc medals, we use an oxidizing agent.

BASIC GUIDELINES FOR SETTING UP ARTWORK

RASTER IMAGES

Pixels are individual blocks of unique colors placed together to make up a raster image. Pixel-based images can come from a digital camera, scanner, or downloaded from the internet.

Individual components of these images cannot be separated or altered, and resolution diminishes when enlarged. While an image may look fine when it is small, it will look blurry and distorted when the size is increased.

If an image is enlarged and it gets blurry or you can see the individual blocks of color, it is a raster image.

Raster images commonly have the file extensions: .bmp, .jpg, .png, or .tiff.

VECTOR IMAGES

Nodes are the points in computer drawn lines that make up a vector image. Lines can be curved or straight, and make any shape that is desired. Node-based images are usually created in a graphics program such as Adobe Illustrator, Corel Draw, and Macromedia Freehand.

Individual components of these drawn images can be separated, colors can be changed, and the size can be increased with no loss of resolution.

A vector image can only be truly manipulated in a vector graphics program. If you are given a file with a graphics program extension, it must be checked to make sure it is true vector art. For example, a bitmap can be saved as a graphics file, but when it is opened it is not vector art, it's still a bitmap inside the file.

Common examples of vector images have the file extensions .eps, .ai, .cdr, & .pdf.

PIXELS vs NODES

RASTER IMAGE

Both images look identical at this size. Note the circled area on the smiley face.

VECTOR IMAGE

The circled area on the raster image has increased by 1000%, which results in poor resolution.

The circled area on the vector image has increased by 1000%, and caused no change in resolution.

The color can also be changed.

Artwork is generally set up in a 2:1 size ratio. Small items like lapel pins are setup in a 3:1 ratio.

SPIN CAST ITEMS:

The best way to produce artwork for a spin cast product is by using raised SOLID shapes, and sinking detail lines into those shapes. When setting up spin cast art, any raised lines should be at least 0.035” thick, unless it is a color filled area, which must be a minimum of 0.06”. Sunken detail lines should generally be at least 0.01” thick.

DIE CAST OR DIE STRUCK ITEMS:

The die struck or die cast production process allows us to produce much thinner raised lines than we are able to with spin cast items. This allows us to produce more details and use more color. Raised lines surrounding areas for color filling are generally as small as 0.02”, and sunken detail lines are about the same as spin cast, at 0.01”.

Black = raised shape areas
White = sunken detail lines
